Jordan Yerbury

Jordan Yerbury (1984) is Austrian Canadian, and he completed his studies in North-America and Europe. After a college degree in Pure and Applied Science at Dawson College in Montreal (2005), Jordan studied architecture at Carleton University in Ottawa, and finished his B.A.S. degree on an exchange at Nottingham University in England (2011) with High Distinction. Jordan began his Masters of Science in the Netherlands in 2013, and after graduating in the stream of Architectural Engineering at Delft University of Technology (2015), he began working in Toronto, Canada.

Jordan met Kai during his studies at TU Delft, they founded JOA in 2014 in Rotterdam. Since 2015, Jordan has worked on dozens of residential, governmental, and commercial projects. As a designer in Toronto, he has been on teams at CMV Group (2016), CORE Architects (2017), Hariri Pontarini Architects (2018), and Just Open Architecture since 2014.

In 2019, Jordan worked as a full-time designer and developer for SIEMENS Canada, Building Technologies. As a front-end programmer of Building Automation Systems (BAS), Jordan has designed, developed, and implemented BACnet applications which employ Real-time Operating Systems (RTOS) to control and monitor large-scale building environments.

Some of the projects that Jordan has worked on since 2015 include: Bow Skyscraper, 1001 Queensway, Square One Shopping Mall, Sainte-Justine Hospital, Concordia University, McGill University, STM Metro Stations in Montreal, Pharma-Science Laboratory, Agriculture Canada, Institut national de la recherche scientifique, Saint Francis-Xavier University, Arviat Elementary School, Saint Francis-Xavier University, University of Guelph Research Station, and many more.
